The Spirit of discernment favors unity in diversity

Discernment, a gift of the Spirit, helps us to differentiate between the Spirit that comes from God versus other sources. God's Spirit helps us to deal with plurality by renouncing simplification, uniformity and indoctrination. The Spirit that comes from God aids us to live as a unity in diversity within our Church, our family, society and nation. When we look around us – do we see the Spirit at work? Is it a spirit that favors unity in diversity or rather a spirit that favors uniformity?

To remain open for discernment is not an easy task. It is easier for us to rely on prejudices and to judge others by applying broad assumption than to open ourselves to change. Discernment starts by saying “no” to what has been taught and indoctrinated over centuries. Discernment starts with the courage to speak up against hypocrisy, even within the Church. Discernment starts with the courage to think for yourself, to put oneself in the position of others and to speak each other's language in order to better understand one other.

Unity yes, uniformity no! Pentecost did not result in a homogeneous language for all Christians. On the contrary, Christians understood the Spirit in his or her own unique language. The Holy Spirit taught the friends of Jesus to conquer the fear of diversity by speaking in each other's language and remaining open to plurality.
